The mission of the School of Family and Consumer Sciences at Northern Illinois University is to generate and transmit knowledge that supports families and individuals in meeting human needs for self-development, social interaction, resource allocation, clothing, food and hospitality. All programs lay the groundwork for graduate study.

The School of Family and Consumer Sciences offers an undergraduate program with a major in Fashion Merchandising leading to a Bachelor of Science degree. Students with this major have a variety of career opportunities related to fashion apparel and related-product merchandising. Careers include various aspects of product development, purchasing, distribution, quality control, promotion and the management of human resources.

The program provides students with product knowledge of textiles and apparel as well as an understanding of socioeconomic influences and managerial and business skills relevant to the merchandising of textile and apparel products. Students are encouraged to consider a minor in business administration, communication studies, or marketing.

Students who enter the Fashion Merchandising program with the courses listed here and who have completed an A.A. or A.S. degree can usually expect to complete the NIU program in two years.
